efore with gunshot injuries.

Explosives, claymore mines, chain grenades, pressure mines, hand grenades, uniforms and ammunition were seized by the STF men along with a large stock of medical items. Instructional booklets on how to treat the wounded were also among two gunny bags full of medical supplies.

The base also provided vital communication facilities to the Tigers who had rigged up an antenna atop a tree and built a platform from which they could operate their radios to contact camps either in Batticaloa or Ampara.
