

Lives not in peril

In your editorial Still, A Sanctuary (Aug. 21) you state, "For people whose lives are in peril, there is no line."

The 155 Tamils' lives were certainly not in peril in Germany. Further, it is questionable whether their lives were in peril in Sri Lanka, because their families have been living there for the past two years (while they were in Germany), and have been unaffected.

I presume you have checked their individual situations when you support their claims of "refugee" and talk of lives in peril. Perhaps you should share this information with the public, because not even the Canadian Government has yet received this information.
